DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

1. Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is not supported by either a working model or an asserted utility or a well established utility.

The claimed method of creating revolution in a vertical direction without providing a momentum above the axis of rotation makes the system inoperative. The perpendicular displacement of the device with lighter and heavier end without creating an arm between the device and the axis cannot create the momentum for turning the device upside down as expected by applicant.

Claims 1-12 are also rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. Specifically, since the claimed invention is not supported by either a working model or an asserted utility or a well established utility for the reasons set forth above, one skilled in the art clearly would not know how to use the claimed invention.

2. Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the disclosed invention is inoperative and therefore lacks utility. The disclosed invention is inoperative because it contradicts the doctrine or principle of conservation of energy.

Doctrine of conservation of energy.

If the boundary considered includes the universe, the principle of the conservation of energy amounts to a statement that the sum total of the energy of the universe is a fixed unalterable quantity.

The principle of the conservation of energy also denies the possibility of "perpetual motion." By "perpetual motion" is meant the devising of some arrangement so that energy in one form can be produced without energy in some other form being used up by the machine. Thus if an engine could be made to do work on external bodies for an indefinite time, and thus give out energy, without being supplied with energy from without, or diminishing the stock of energy in all its various forms which it originally possessed, we should have a means of creating energy, and this is in direct contradiction to the principle of the conservation of energy.

When a patent applicant presents an application describing an invention that contradicts known scientific principles, or relies on previously undiscovered scientific phenomenon, the burden is on the examiner simply to point out this fact to the appellant... The burden shifts to appellant to demonstrate either that his invention, as claimed, is operable or does not violate basic scientific principles, or that those basic scientific principles are incorrect. As stated by the Patent Office Board of Appeals, Newman v. Quigg 681 F.Supp 16, at 18, 5 U.S.P.Q. 2d 1880(1988).

Applicant is required to furnish a working model of their invention in order to demonstrate its operability. See MPEP § 608.03.
